

Cannell called in to help beat Watford

Victorian coaches Tim White and Bobby McLachlan have rushed a second stopper, Stuart Cannell of Ajax, into their squad in a tactical move aimed at combatting Watford strikers Luther Blissett and Ross Jenkins at Olympic Park tomorrow (Thursday) night.

Cannell and Steve Blair of Hellas, both well over 30, will mark the two Watford strikers between them.

And White has decided on Vince Bannon of Juventus and Igor Hazabent of JUST to take on Watford's brilliant wingers, John Barnes and Nigel Callaghan.

John Gardiner will operate in front of the Victorian back four, but will slot behind them as a sweeper when Watford pushes up in numbers.

Only one position remains open in the Victorian team. It is being contested by Peter Boyle of Makedonia and Footscray JUST captain Zoran Ilioski.

Whoever gets the nod will partner Gardiner and Ken Murphy in midfield.

A training match against First Division side Box Hill on Monday night was to help determine whether Boyle or Ilioski would play.

The attack will comprise Hellas pair Charlie Egan and Alun Evans, flanked by tear-away Doug Brown of Makedonia.

And Peter Laumets of Hellas gets the nod as goalkeeper. Dennis Boland (JUST) who has tried for so long to get a game for Victoria, will be on the bench because he has not been playing regularly for JUST over the past few weeks.

Meanwhile, Watford has joined the chase for England striker Tony Woodcock of German club FC Koeln. He is nearing the end of his contract there. His transfer fee is expected to be about $300,000, and Arsenal also is chasing him.

While Watford was winning promotion to the English First Division with a 2-0 win against Wrexham before a 20,000 crowd, its superstar chairman Elton John was performing a concert in Norway.

What a remarkable achievement by Watford and its 38-year-old manager Graham Taylor to rise from the depths of the Fourth Division to the First Division in five fantastic seasons!

Taylor is one of the most admired managers in England. Taylor took over Watford in 1977 and has a contract pledging him to remain with the club until 1985. Elton John repeatedly has said he will do everything in his power to keep him despite the obvious pressure of offers from the richer First Division clubs.

Promotion battle looms

By LAURIE SCHWAB

The Philips League has a fight on its hands if it tries to stop promotion and relegation for the next two years.

The Australian Soccer Federation, which includes mainly State League representatives, is sure to vote heavily against the proposal.

In a paper commissioned by the PSL executive committee, David Dillon of Canberra City outlined a proposal to suspend promotion and relegation this year and next year, and to increase the league from 16 to 18 clubs in 1984.

He presented the paper to the PSL Council of Clubs meeting in Canberra last Saturday.

The two additional teams in 1984 would come from Tasmania and either the Gold Coast, NSW central coast or Geelong.

Promotion and relegation, the paper proposed, should resume at the end of 1984.

And there were suggestions that the relegated clubs then should be able to play off against clubs seeking promotion.

Those clubs would represent the same geographical areas as the relegated clubs, and would first have been screened for suitability. They would have to have financial strength, good ground facilities and good players.

DOCHERTY DELAYS GREENHOFF BID

Hellas' new coach Tommy Docherty wants to wait until after Sunday's clash with Makedonia before he decides whether to recruit Brian Greenhoff from Leeds United.

Docherty says Greenhoff would be available for a 10-week guest stint.

But while delaying his decision on Greenhoff, Docherty did say that he was eager to sign up an orthodox right winger.

Docherty started his initial five-week coaching stint with Hellas with a 2-1 victory over Brisbane Lions last Sunday.

Previous coach John Margaritis was to work in conjunction with Docherty but quit after introducing Docherty to the players at training. It was a matter of pride — understandably so.

Docherty will return to England in four weeks' time and although he has made no firm commitment, he hopes to return to rejoin Hellas for the rest of the season.

Makedonia's forward line

Peter Ollerton, 31 on Saturday, a terror to coaches during his 12 years as a player, is a coach himself now — and a very good one after only a year's experience.

Ollerton's shrewdness, toughness and down-to-earth approach have made Preston Makedonia a challenger for the PSL championship in only its second season in the league.

If experience counts for anything, Ollerton has had more than most.

During a career in which he scored 20 goals in 55 games for Australia (he's the all-time third-highest Soccer score), Ollerton has worn the colors of six clubs — Ringwood-Wilhelmina, APIA, South Melbourne, Hellas, Marconi, Footscray J.U.S.T. and Makedonia.

He started as an apprentice with Blackpool, then in the English First Division. He was 15 then, and Blackpool's players included Alan Ball, Emyln Hughes, Tommy Hutchinson, and Jim Armfield.

At 18 he was in the company of Kevin Keegan, Tommy Smith, Ray Clemence and other stars during a six-month trial with Liverpool, following which he scored 24 goals in a season with Fleetwood in the Northern Premier League — a feat which attracted the attention of Charlton Athletic and Stoke City.

But as it happened, Wilhelmina official Fred Hutchinson lured him to Australia. "I didn't even know where Australia was at the time," he says. So he arrived at the age of 19, in April, 1971, to play in a talented side boasting such excellent players as Fred Buncie, David Pygall, Mike Pye and goalkeeper John Kennedy.

He notched 10 goals in his first season and 14 in 1972 before switching to APIA part of the way into the 1973 season.

He scored a hat-trick in his very first game as APIA beat Croatia 3-1 and finished that year with 14 goals.

In 1974 he was top scorer in the NSW First Division with 22 and it was that year that coach Rale Rasic brought him into the national team for a scoreless draw with a visiting Auckland XI. It was two games later that he scored his first goal for Australia — in a 2-0 victory over Uruguay at the Sydney Cricket Ground, and he went on to make two appearances in the 1974 World Cup finals, as a substitute against West Germany and Chile.

A cartilage operation interrupted his career but in 1975 he was runner-up to Attila Abonyi among the NSW goalscorers. The same year he married Jill, a Melbourne girl, and an offer from Hellas fitted nicely into their plans to return to Victoria.

Hellas paid $5500 for the big striker and in his first year with the club, Hellas won the State League championship by nine points, thanks not only to Ollerton but also Jimmy Armstrong, Jimmy Mackay, Steve Walker, and John Kennedy. Ollerton started that season — 1976 — by scoring a hat-trick in the Ampol Cup final, which Hellas won 4-1 against Footscray J.U.S.T.

LAURIE SCHWAB

Ollerton played with Hellas in 1977, the first year of the PSL but in 1978, when he was top scorer in the league, coach Dave MacLaren decided to get rid of him, resulting in Ollerton's transfer to Marconi.

He couldn't settle in Sydney however, and so it was back to Victoria to join Footscray J.U.S.T. in 1979. Here he played as sweeper, and in midfield as well as up front until he transferred to Makedonia which was making a bid for the State League championship.

He scored 11 goals in 11 games that year as Makedonia took the title and gained promotion to the PSL. Last year he notched 10 goals in the PSL and at the time of writing, he had four goals so far in 1982, although he uses himself mainly as a substitute, in order to give the other players a run.

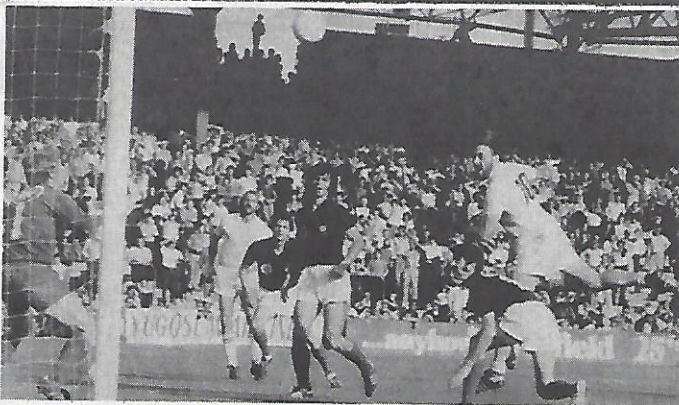

Ollerton discusses his coaching, his players, his aspirations for Makedonia, and his past clashes with coaches in this interview with "Soccer Action" editor LAURIE SCHWAB:

SCHWAB: Our columnist Mike Johnson wrote in "Soccer Action" recently about the many members of Rale Rasic's 1974 national team who have turned successfully to coaching. Is Rasic's influence the reason, or were these players "naturals" from the beginning?

OLLERTON: I read that column by Johnson, and it was quite true. Ray Richards coached Marconi and APIA, John Watkins is with Sutherland, Doug Djesevic coached Avala, Jack Kelly had Heidelberg, Manfred Schaefer and Johnny Warren both had St. George, Jimmy Rooney was joint coach of Heidelberg, Ron Corry coached Manly, Jimmy Millsavjevic is coaching Ringwood United, Attila Abonyi's got Riverwood and of course I'm at Makedonia. I guess the players of that era have been coming to the end of their playing careers and are wanting to put something back into the sport. They've been under a lot of coaches during their careers, they've seen a lot of local and overseas teams and they've picked up a lot of knowledge.

SCHWAB: But why the 1974 players in particular? Was Rasic the inspiration?

OLLERTON: Definitely. Most players, like me, admired him for his ability on and off the field, and I suppose he was the first man in soccer to get that sort of recognition and media exposure. I know Rooney, Mackay and many others were into Rasic and the things he did. And, looking back, I guess Rasic is the best coach I've been under in Australia. We all picked

A spectacular goal by Peter Ollerton (No. 10) in front of a packed stand at Olympic Park. He was playing for South Melbourne Hellas against another of his former clubs, Footscray J.U.S.T. up a lot from him. As far as the 1974 team was concerned, he did everything any coach possibly could have done to get us to the World Cup. Although he looked after himself first and foremost, he also made sure the players looked after themselves. He was the one who got us together and helped us win a fair bonus deal from the ASF. He also stood, by his players. There was a squad of about 18, and once you got into it — which was very hard to do — you had a good chance of staying there. It was not like the force of 1980-81 when everyone in the country played for the national team. But getting back to our coaching aspirations, I guess coaching was more accentuated in the 1974 period than it had been previously in the years of Stan Ackerley and Co. Also, there were better coaching books around and more research into coaching, which all helped. But it was the attitude of the players, too. I always thought I could do it. So did many others. People thought Jimmy Mackay would turn to coaching, but he didn't. You have to want to do it yourself.

SCHWAB: What then, is your particular attitude to coaching?

OLLERTON: Well, from Rasic I learned how to talk to players individually and as a squad. But my tactics aren't taken from anyone else. I've been in the game long enough and I know Australian soccer well enough to adopt the tactics I need for particular games.

SCHWAB: When you took over as coach of Makedonia in the PSL, you decided very quickly that the team needed new blood. Why?

OLLERTON: I was the only player in the squad with PSL experience at the time that Brian Edgley resigned under pressure from the committee. The president, John Branov, had told me from the start that he had plans for me — either as assistant coach or perhaps as player-coach. John Gardner was player-coach of Croatia, and he was getting good results, so Branov thought that might be a good thing for Makedonia too. So Branov rang me the night Edgley quit and offered me the job. I told him that if he wants success — and we were in the relegation zone at the time — we needed players with PSL experience. He agreed, so I started looking around and eventually picked up Peter Boyle from West Adelaide, and Isaac Farrell and Richard Wilson from Canberra. They blended in with what we had and we went on to finish about 11th after picking up 17 points in the second half of the season, compared with 10 or 11 points in the first half.

Australia's best: Ollerton

'We'll murder Hellas on Sunday'

SCHWAB: In the process of elimination that led to the signing of the three players you mentioned, which ones got away?

OLLERTON: Mark Treanter, Willie Murray and Jim Cant of Sydney City, Ivo Prskalo of Marconi and a few others.

SCHWAB: You also made up your mind to let a few players go. Why?

OLLERTON: That was the club, not me. We had about 15 or 16 players, and four or five still had to be paid although they weren't being used. That's why the club wanted to sell fellows like Lou Kastner, Jeff Faulkner, John Higham, Terry Nolan and Ron Maciver.

SCHWAB: What sort of qualities do you look for when buying a player?

OLLERTON: It's different for various positions. First of all, they have to be willing to give 100 per cent in the game and at training. Attitude is the biggest factor, because skill and talent are no good without it — and with a part-time player who has to hold down a job as well, 100 per cent attitude is hard to get. I also look at the player's background, what he has done for his previous clubs and how he would suit us.

SCHWAB: Do you feel you need more players right now?

OLLERTON: I feel, to be a top four side next year, we need two or three new men.

SCHWAB: But you're so close to the top four now that those two or three men could make the difference immediately, so why not go for them?

OLLERTON: At the moment we're only looking a game ahead, taking things as they come, but of course if the right player came along — a player who would make that difference — we'd buy him straight away. We've got the money, because we haven't spent any.

SCHWAB: Well, can you get into the top four with what you've got at the moment?

OLLERTON: The players at the club do have an outside chance of doing that. If we were to buy new players, we'd have to get rid of some of those we have — and all of them are good players. In fact, only Sydney City, APIA and perhaps St. George can match the depth we have in our squad. Certainly we've got far greater depth than the other Melbourne clubs. I've got fellows on the sidelines who could play in J.U.S.T.'s senior team tomorrow — fellows like Mike Rainey or Rob Cullen for example. If I did splash out money, I'd do so only for a midfielder or defender.

SCHWAB: Do you regret not having made a bid for Gary Byrne before he went to Canberra?

OLLERTON: No, he wouldn't have suited our style. He's a 15 or 20 yard-passer. I want people to get forward quickly to support the strikers and to score. That's what we lack. Our midfielders don't get forward to score goals. I want a midfielder like that.

SCHWAB: You tried, didn't you?

OLLERTON: I approached Graham Honeyman and Brian Northcote early on. And of course we offered J.U.S.T. $20,000 for Zoran Illoski, which they turned down.

SCHWAB: George Christopoulos is the type of player you're looking for. Why didn't you go for him?

OLLERTON: We didn't really know about him so we didn't get a chance to make a bid.

SCHWAB: You left Peter Boyle out of the team that beat Olympic 4-1. Alan Whittle wasn't playing either. Was he left out?

OLLERTON: No, he was injured. He's got a bad achilles tendon and he's also had to pull out of the Victorian squad which will meet Watford.

SCHWAB: The midfield you used against Olympic was very disciplined defensively but is it capable of attacking effectively against a side that defends against you?

OLLERTON: Yes, I'm confident they can work the ball up to the front three. George McMillan is a much more attacking player than he looked to be against Olympic, so too is John Little.

SCHWAB: But you'll lose McMillan when he goes to Scotland on holidays next week, and Boyle, who is a creative player, appears to be on the outer.

OLLERTON: His form over three or four weeks was down and he was the first to realise it. I wanted to put in the young fellows, Miranda and Little, so he had to go to make room for them but Boyle certainly is not out of the running. He'll have to get his head up and work at his game.

SCHWAB: Talking about getting your head up, Steve Beech must be an example to all players in that regard. He was dropped a few times but keeps on coming back strongly.

OLLERTON: You're right. He's the perfect example to every player in Australia. I wish I had 12 with his attitude. He doesn't have tremendous skill but he gives you 100 per cent every time he plays. He dives into tackles, he's tremendously fit, he plays the easy ball, and when he's out of the side he takes it like a true sportsman. He was dropped after the game against Marconi because he played poorly and he was the best player on the park in our Second Division team the following week. Then I brought him back to mark Jim Redfern and he did a great job.

SCHWAB: You have a fine forward line. How would you compare it with these of other clubs?

OLLERTON: I'd say without reservation that it's the best forward line in Australia. Even when we've lost or drawn games, those forwards always created a lot of chances. Individually they're all very good players, and they're all very good finishers. They make it hard for opponents, because while it's easy to mark one scorer out of the game, it's hard to cope with three of them.

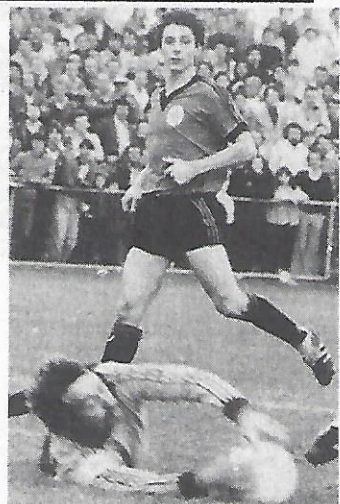

SCHWAB: What's more, you haven't had the best from your attack because at various stages, you've been unable to field either Claude Lucchesi, Robbie Cullen or Gary Ward.

OLLERTON: That's right. We've had combinations of Cullen-Ward-Brown, Cullen-Lucchesi-Brown, or Brown-Cullen. The best blend is the one we used against Olympic — Ward-Lucchesi-Brown.

SCHWAB: What then of Rob Cullen?

OLLERTON: You always get 100 per cent effort from Robbie but it seems he's got a few other things on his mind at the moment. There's talk about him going home to Scotland at the end of the year and that might be affecting him. But Robbie's not really a goalscorer. You need Lucchesi and Brown to create and score as well. Robbie can't seem to motivate himself to really believe in his own ability. There's no reason for that, because he can do it when he really wants to. Gary Ward will tell you at training that he'll score two or three on the weekend — if he succeeds or not — but you won't hear that from Robbie.

SCHWAB: We've all grown closely acquainted with Brown's qualities, but what are Macedonia defender Steve Beech, with his goalkeeper Steve Potter. Coach Ollerton says Beech's sportsmanship and determination make him an example to all players in Australia.

Lucchesi's? It was you who turned him from a midfielder into a central striker.

OLLERTON: I felt he would be better suited there if he was given the right service. I felt if we played it to his feet, he could use his great skill to turn defenders, or hold it and wait for support. He was injured for quite a while so we haven't really seen the best of him yet. He can be a very, very good centre forward.

SCHWAB: Alan Whittle starred in the Ampol Cup but has been a bit hot and cold in the league. Is it because of injury or some other reason?

OLLERTON: We've talked about that and I feel maybe Alan, as assistant coach, gets a bit too involved in other people's games while he's on the park. He's talking to them too much and forgetting about his own game. He's been one of our better players overall but he went down a bit in recent weeks.

Margaritis refused to play second fiddle to the Doc

If John Margaritis was capable, in the eyes of the club and the supporters, of leading South Melbourne Hellas with distinction for the past two seasons, it makes little sense that he should be forced out after the club's recent poor run.

But that's what happened. He was forced out by his own pride. He wasn't about to play second fiddle to Tommy Docherty or anyone else, and so it must be with any self-respecting coach.

The end has to come for all coaches, but Hellas's downfall was not due only to Margaritis.

Margaritis represented the stability of Hellas for two and a half years. Chopping off his head was not the answer.

It was up to the committee and Margaritis to pinpoint the problems together and then work hard at solving them.

The appointment of Tommy Docherty is no more than a stop-gap measure. With no respect for Tommy, if he does succeed in fixing the team, it's logical that Margaritis would have done likewise had he been given time.

My view is that coaches should be allowed to stay with a club over a long period, but first the club must make sure it hires the right man, a man with the right knowledge and attitude, not a cowboy.

The club must be certain it has the man it wants and having made that decision it must stand by him through thick and thin.

That is not the case at the moment.

No wonder then that we tend more and more to lose respect for soccer's administration at club and federation levels.

Recently the NSW Federation fined St George coach Frank Arok over allegedly derogatory statements he made to the Press about the Ampol Cup. When will it fine club secretaries, club presidents or board members over their mistakes? No, that does not happen.

Looking over the league near the half-way stage, it is true that Hellas and to a lesser extent APIA, have been among the failures so far.

APIA boomed early but recent poor results have enabled the other teams to bridge the gap.

Meanwhile, Marconi is moving smoothly towards the top thanks to the appointment of John Perin as coach, Frank Arok, who, like Kapetanovic, had to remould his team.

Arok has established his playing staff, he has introduced firm discipline, and once you have that, everything else comes naturally.

Meanwhile, Adelaide City reacted to the appointment of John Perin as coach by taking five points from its first four matches under him. Perin is the personification of his club's history. No club every should part company with such a player.

From what I've been told by the players, they're running their guts out for the club now because of the respect they have for Perin's stature.

Hellas, despite its bad run, is not finished by any means because it has good players.

had to replace Eddie Krncevic, Peter Sharpe, and others. Roberto Vieri is back in all his glory, and he's still the maestro of old. He is living proof that Australian players simply do not have the mentality to become midfield maestros in the true sense.

Since he got into the side, Marconi is unbeaten. Some of his team mates may not like having to do extra running for him, but on the other hand he can do for them with one pass what they can't do in three weeks.

During Hellas's great years of the sixties, it had a maestro in Con Nestoridis. Polonia had Vic Janczyk, JUST had Tommy Stankovic.

St George, like Marconi, has been moving smoothly up the table, also as a result of resolute work by its coach, Frank Arok, who, like Kapetanovic, had to remould his team.

Arok has established his playing staff, he has introduced firm discipline, and once you have that, everything else comes naturally.

Meanwhile, Adelaide City reacted to the appointment of John Perin as coach by taking five points from its first four matches under him. Perin is the personification of his club's history. No club every should part company with such a player.

From what I've been told by the players, they're running their guts out for the club now because of the respect they have for Perin's stature.

Hellas, despite its bad run, is not finished by any means because it has good players.

Let's hope they leave their problems behind them quickly. West Germany, Brazil and Spain will, in my opinion, be the top three teams in the World Cup finals.

New Zealand carries the hopes of this part of the world, and I wish them well. No-one can demand more from the players than what they've given already, but if they do manage to get perhaps a draw, it will be a tremendous bonus.

The stars of the World Cup, I think, will be Zico of Brazil and Karl-Heinz Rummenigge of Germany.

Diego Maradona, like his Argentinean team will, I believe, be too heavily affected by the political situation over the Falkland Islands, to show his best.

Kevin Keegan is more a team player so, although England should do quite well, I don't expect him to shine the way Zico and Rummenigge will.

Paul Breitner also will be a big hit in the German team.

What an unbelievable player he is. He played his last World Cup eight years ago, as a left back. Now he's in midfield and he's controlling every game.

Johnny Warren reacted on his TV show to my criticism about what he said about Footscray J.U.S.T. by saying I should get my facts straight.

Well, I'm not the only one who heard Johnny saying that, for the good of Australian soccer, he hoped Wollongong would beat JUST I even talked about it to Willie Wallace who also was on the show, and he agreed that it was said.

A little midfielder controlled the match as Knox City met Kew City in the Victorian under 11 Cup.

He was up and down the field, he took corners with power and characteristic of his age group, his skill was extraordinary, his sportsmanship of the highest order.

The match was scoreless after full time, so penalties had to decide the issue.

The little midfielder took the first penalty for Knox and scored.

He then changed shirts and went into goal to defend against the Kew penalty takers.

In the end, Knox lost the penalties showdown but this boy had covered himself in glory.

His name is Cameron Heath.

Bergers face J.U.S.T. on way to top four

Makedonia v Hellas, 'Gong seeks upset

By LAURIE SCHWAB

Vlatko Belic, Milan Kojic, Zoran Illoski and Zdravko Lujic stand in the way of Heidelberg-Alexander's advance into the top four on Sunday.

Heidelberg is out of the four only on goal difference, after its courageous 2-2 draw with Brisbane City last weekend.

Now it hopes that Sydney City or St. George will drop points to make room "upstairs".

But to take advantage of a possible vacancy, Heidelberg will have to beat Footscray J.U.S.T. in one of two fierce local derbies to be played in Melbourne on Sunday.

Heidelberg is unbeaten in its two games at its new Olympic Village ground but it meets a J.U.S.T. team that is full of spirit despite the absence of Slobodan Jovanovic and Vlado Pijevajic. Pijevajic became suddenly ill and had to have a stomach operation on Saturday night, before J.U.S.T.'s 3-1 victory over Newcastle. He will be out for up to six weeks, and Jovanovic still is carrying a leg injury which also may require an operation.

It was pleasing to J.U.S.T. therefore that Vlatko Belic was best on the ground after being included in midfield.

The big, powerful former youth international has the tackling strength and aerial ability to lessen the effectiveness of the Heidelberg midfield.

Milan Kojic, after a disappointing start to the season, has found the form that made him a star in the Yugoslav Second Division, so good was he there, that Lujic often had to sit on the bench because he couldn't displace Kojic.

Now both are playing on the same forward line and, with the support of Mendo Ristovski who has settled well into his old team after coming back from Juventus, they should make life difficult for Heidelberg's brilliant defence.

And if Heidelberg has a midfield match-winner in Jim Campbell, J.U.S.T. also has one in Illoski who can't do a thing wrong this year.

Heidelberg's fortunes however, have been boosted by Gary Cole and Jamie Paton's return to goalscoring form. Cole created Paton's goal against Brisbane City and scored one himself. It's likely he will be tagged by Kyri Kyriakoulas, J.U.S.T.'s ferocious man mountain.

But Heidelberg will start as favorite. Only one team in the league, Sydney City, has conceded fewer goals than Heidelberg — a tribute to Arthur McMillan, John Yzendoorn, Don Macleod, Charlie Yankos and Jeff Oliver.

Their defensive play is so well organised that J.U.S.T. will need a big slice of luck to break through.

Just down the road, at Connor Reserve in Reservoir, Makedonia's direct attack will be pitted against the more controlled, ball-playing style of South Melbourne Hellas.

Tommy Docherty will have Alan Evans back after suspension and Alan Davidson off the injured list. Surprisingly, he's talking about dropping Socrates Nicolades to make room for Davidson at left back, even though Nicolades played very well against Brisbane Lions.

And where do you put Evans?

Peter Boyle says, probably, that he wants to play 4-2-4 (read also 4-4-2), with right and left wingers.

Doug Brown will confront probably Gerry Bennett, and Gary Ward will be looking for the high balls.

The contrast of styles between these two teams should make for an intriguing tactical battle and should ensure a bumper crowd at Connor Reserve.

Peter Boyle and Alan Whittle remained on the sidelines in Makedonia's 0-1 loss to Wollongong last week, and it wouldn't surprise to see at least one of them back in the team.

Wollongong meanwhile, plans to open up the league by knocking off mighty Olympic at Pratten Park.

Coach Ken Morton says Wollongong showed a lot of discipline, fire and organisation in its victory against Makedonia. All his team needs now, he says, is consistency.

John Fleming and Lee Adam are likely to play very close to Olympic's playmakers Peter Katholos and Peter Raskopoulos, and Morton will hope for quick breaks via Phil O'Connor, Peter Tredinnick and Roy Cotton.

Olympic has the class to win, but more and more, its flamboyance is being stifled by close marking.

Second-placed APIA appears to have recovered from its flat patch at does not away from home against Adelaide City which wants to make amends for the loss to West Adelaide City is well aware that if Brisbane City succeeds in achieving a surprise result against St. George, it could find itself in the relegation zone again.

Jim Hermiston appears to have inspired Brisbane City to new heights, but the team's away record remains the most dismal in the league. In seven away games, City has managed only one goal.

St. George has no such goalscoring problems, and by Sunday, Des Martin should have recovered fully from his troubling shoulder injury.

Brisbane Lions' gigantic stopper Col Bennett will be more fearsome than ever at Richlands on Sunday because his opponent, John Kostina, has scored six goals for Sydney City in the past three games.

However, paying too much attention to Kostina could result in David Mitchell doing the damage instead.

With Murray Barnes back in midfield, Sydney City remains the most complete side in Australia, but even such looks like uncut in Brisbane.

And although Lions lost to South Melbourne, it still looks like a team capable of beating anyone.

Alan Niven is a great left back, Bennett and Ferris a solid centre-back combination and the forward line of Low-Williamson-Millman is positively deadly.

Lions however, lack real class in midfield. Mark Atmore is the best of the trio, but he alone can't match the things that Barnes, Jim Patikas and John Spanos can do.

West Adelaide did the unexpected in beating Adelaide City — I say unexpected not because West lacks talent but because it must be missing Steve Sumner and Alan Booth. That victory therefore must have been a great morale-booster for its clash with Marconi on Sunday.

Nevertheless, I expect Marconi to win. It's a long haul from Adelaide and across town from Mascot Airport, and the South Australians may arrive without the necessary sharpness to counter the rearward of Ian Hunter and Rene Licata, the gulls of Mark Jankovics, the generalship of Roberto Vierl.

Canberra meanwhile, should have a relatively effortless victory against struggling Newcastle at Bruce Stadium.

George Christopoulos was in fine form in Canberra's scoreless draw with Olympic. At home, he'll have more latitude to attack — and we may well see some of his explosive shooting. Christopoulos, combining with Gary Byrne to provide service to Tony Brennan, Ian Gibson and Ian Purdie, will make it a sorry afternoon for the Newcastle battlers who still are awaiting reinforcements.

Barcelona's win a preview to Spain

No, I said, I am NOT getting up at 4.30 am to watch the match 'live.' What for, I asked back; they'll run the video at 6.30 again.

So I was up at 4 am, totally awake, ready for action. Some built-in timing mechanism, developed over many years of weird living habits, served as my alarm clock.

And so there it was, the majestic Nou Camp stadium of Barcelona (please pronounce it properly as "Bar-thelona"), the venue of the European Cup Winners' Cup final, courtesy of Channel 0-28, bless them for their enterprise.

I peeped out through the curtains: the street was in total darkness. No light anywhere in sight.

One lunatic is enough for one street.

Then, the match — a marvellous, timely preview of things to come in June and July during the World Cup.

If you thought the Catalan fans of 'Barca' were frenzied, wait till you see and hear the hysteria for Spain's national team.

They almost literally will bring the house down, frightening humans and animals out of their way.

Which brings me to the first point: I'm changing my forecasts about the Cup.

I still argue, from Brazil, Germany and perhaps another

Andrew Dettre

er half dozen or so have stronger teams — but only Spain will have this menacing crowd support.

And that's a clear goal or two advantage — possibly enough even to win the damned thing.

Then — crowd control. Or rather, the lack of it.

How often, how very often have we lamented in Australia the pathetic efforts of our officialdom to keep fans off the pitch?

Well, what about Barcelona, one of the two major World Cup venues where hundreds of people could rush on to the field after the game to hug their heroic heroes — without the apparent presence of a policeman, soldier or even mean-looking German Shepherd dog?

It's all lovely when they invade the pitch to celebrate — but it's somewhat frightening to contemplate what can happen if, by any chance, they have reason to be angry.

There, in the middle of this bedlam, was UEFA chief Dr Artemio Franchi, smiling weakly, helplessly, pretending not to see the chaos.

And all this, as I said, where several of the World Cup matches will be played in an atmosphere of total hysteria...

Finally — let's never complain again about our referees.

The German Eschweller, a lean, ascetic figure, played a major part in both Spanish goals.

Just before the first one he allowed a Belgian defender to be "removed" from under the ball, by that old fox, Quini, giving Simonsen a clear header and a goal.

Then, before the winning Barcelona goal, he was still measuring the distance to the "wall", waving off Belgian protests and clearly talking to them — when the free kick was quickly taken (unseen either by the referee or the camera) resulting in yet another goal.

I want to know how Herr Eschweller would have got out of Nou Camp stadium alive — if he had erred twice like that against the Spaniards...

Do expect the same during the World Cup from referees when the home team is in action unless they have had previous training as kamikaze pilots...

Youth in Watford prelude

A star-studded Metropolitan Youth XI coached by Ian Petherick will meet Tim Victoria's State Youth side in the curtain-raiser to Victoria's match against Watford tomorrow (Thursday) night at Olympic Park.

Ian Petherick's team is substituting for the Institute of Sport side which has had to call off its plans to come to Melbourne for the curtain-raiser. Petherick's team includes Moreland's ace goalscorer Peter Constantinou, Nunawading's brilliant midfielder Nick van Egmond and

Jan, son of the former Wilhelmshaven goalkeeper of the same name, Andy Zinn. Zinn's dream debut with the Juventus senior team last weekend and Port Melbourne's sensational Mike Petersen, son of Hans Petersen, the former star of Lions and Hakoah.

The full squad is: Sammy Asvestas, Peter Constantinou (Moreland); Claudio Avian (Heidelberg-Alexander); David Azopardi, John Gabrielson, Alan Roodhouse (Box Hill); Nick van Egmond Jr (Nunawading); John Kanesalles, Tony Owen, (Hellas); Aki Kotzamehalls, Mike Petersen (Port Melbourne); Tom McGirrrow (Albion Rovers); Mike Runjo (Springvale); Warren Spink (Dorseton); Andrew Zinn, Dominic Rucci (Juventus).

Tim White's Victorian team finished third in the national under-19 championships in Canberra at the weekend.

Hellas and the Doc end long drought

South Melbourne Hellas, assisted by new coach Tommy Docherty, scored its first victory in eight weeks by beating Brisbane Lions 2-1 at Middle Park.

South Melbourne's previous win was against Brisbane City at the same ground.
Docherty said after the game that although he was pleased by the performance he would try to sign a right winger.

"I play with wingers everywhere I go and I want to do the same here."

He would not say however which new players he had in mind.

Hellas appeared to have scored a third goal late in the match but the referee, Jim

Fearn, ruled that a George Campbell deflected shot had not crossed the line before it was cleared.

Lions' mid-fielder Mark Atmore however said after the match that the ball had in fact crossed the line and that it should have been a goal.

The decision angered the fans closest to the action and a hall of cans fell around the linesmen.

Hellas played without captain Alan Evans who was suspended. His place in attack went to Branko Buljevic.

Buljevic had the first scoring chance of the game but hit the cross bar with his header after a cross by John Stevenson.

It was Stevenson again who crossed before George Campbell scored South Melbourne's first goal with a low drive in the 20th minute.

Lions' coach Joe Gilroy reshuffled his line-up after half time, moving sweeper
Bobby Ferris on to the forward line, pulling Billy Williamson back into midfield and sending Paul Burns into the defence.

Lions left back Alan Niven cleared a shot by Charlie Egan off the line before Egan headed Hellas's second goal from a cross by Stevenson in the 50th minute.

It was Egan's 10th goal of the season.

Atmore put Lions back into the game with a 30 metre goal 10 minutes from the end, just before the disallowed goal by Campbell.

Wollongong expects midfielder Alan Waldron, 29, to arrive from Hong Kong tomorrow (Thursday), in time to play against league leader
Sydney Olympic in Sydney on Sunday.

Waldron played in England for Bury, Bolton and Blackpool before going to Hong Kong.
Wollongong's form will have a big bearing on the top half of the league, for it meets Sydney
City the week after its game against Olympic.

The following week after its game against Olympic.
The following week it returns to the Showgrounds to meet South Melbourne Hellas.
Wollongong played one of its best matches of the season to beat Makedonia in a fiercely contested match in Wollongong.

The home side got off to a dream start with a goal after 30 seconds and contained its opponents admirably to run out surprising but richly deserved winners.

Makedonia came to Wollongong with a high reputation but was shocked in the Wolves first attack when centre forward Roy Cotton collected a superb through ball from Larry Gaffney and shot into the net.

Makedonia was visibly shocked and in the third minute
winger Phil O'Connor hit a diagonal shot wide after being put through by Lee Adam.

O'Connor was having a field day on the left side and goalkeeper Steve Potter saved a number of awkward situations with some clean interceptions.

The Wolves were clearly the better team in the first half and Makedonia's first shot at goal - a volley by John Little that went over - came in the 40th minute.

In the second half Makedonia surged forward with more consistency and for a few moments had the Wolves defence under pressure.

But former soccerero Arno Bertagna was a pillar of strength at the back and there was little the visitors could do.
In the 10th minute O'Connor missed a good chance for the Wolves when put through by Peter Treddinick before Gaffney cleared on the line when goalkeeper Jim Preston misjudged a centre from Doug Brown.

Cotton should have made it two for the Wolves when he hesitated in front of goal and Richard Miranda cleared.

In the 25th minute goalkeeper Preston effected two consecutive saves from Claude Lucchesi and Little.
With eight minutes to go the Wolves had another chance when substitute Phil Kerr shot over the bar in an excellent position.

At this point Makedonia threw everything into attack.
But with a few seconds remaining Treddinick had a shot well saved by Potter, who was undoubtedly the best player in a somewhat disappointing

A midfield war with no winner plus solid defensive work at both ends leaves few good scoring opportunities and the end result is a scoreless draw - which was probably justice to both on the day.

Most of the play was confined to the midfield and in the first half Canberra just had the edge.

The continual running of Brennan with the immaculate distribution of Byrne should have done more for the Canberra cause in the early stages.

Olympics all-out attacking style was blunted without a decent supply of the ball which was never provided by Katholos or Raskopolous and much of the fetch and carry work fell onto the shoulders of Redfern.

Without his speed on the flank Olympics attack, when it did start to move, was lopsided and resulted in hopeful assaults which were mopped up by Christopolous with arrogant ease.

Consequently, the chances to score goals in good positions were limited at both ends.

Gibson put Stone through in the 7th minute but his hurried shot went over the bar and Hoszkowski kept a Jennings' header out 12 minutes later with a fantastic reflex save.

Everything else before the interval was hurried and the ball went across the goalmouth or over the top of both ends.

After the break the pattern changed little initially with Olympic failing to make forward progress quickly enough when in possession and Canberra never having enough players up front when they broke through the midfield scramble.

With 20 minutes to go Canberra began to run out of steam and operating an effective offside trap, appeared to settle for the draw.

However, JUST would prefer to get former coach

kner.

Meantime the team will remain under the charge of Jim Milne who has an unbeaten record in his two weeks as

The fullback relegated himself to the bench for the match.

Vlatko Belic turned out to be the man of the match with a stunning performance in mid-field.

He set up JUST's opening two goals and seems to have returned to his best form after a lean spell in which he was affected by a section of the crowd intent on harassing him through the matches.

JUST hit the lead after only three minutes when Belic received from Zdravko Lujic and his cross from the left was forced home by Milan Kojic at the far post.

Newcastle levelled five minutes later when Craig Mason caught Dennis Boland off his line.

The visitors were as poor a side and only a miracle could possibly put it out of the re-legation zone.

Footscray descended to Newcastle's level - hardly able to string two passes to-

McKendry slams Brisbane, Adelaide refs

Bris. City 2 Heidelberg 2

Scorers: Glockner, Connor pen. (BC), Paton, Cole (H). Venue: Spencer Park. Crowd: About 2000.

Referee: Dave Nugent 7. BRISBANE CITY: Pazano 8, McVeigh 6, Hamilton 7, Liddell 8, Perry 7, Hamilton 7, Pimblett 8, Palinkas 7, Glockner 7, Carey 6, Connor 7 (Bohen 81st).

HEIDELBERG: Oliver 8, McMillan 7, Zandvoort 7, MacLeod 6, Tansley 6, Salemidis 8, Campbell 8, Yankos 7, Taylor 7, Paton 7, Cole 7.

Heidelberg Alexander coach Len McKendry again bit out at poor refereeing which he claims is causing his team to hobble home after every match in Brisbane and Adelaide.

McKendry pointed out in the dressing room after Alexander's 2-2 draw with Brisbane City at Spencer Park last weekend that there were very few shins or ankles which came out of the game unscathed.

"The referee should have taken firm control at the beginning. A yellow card should have been shown," McKendry said.

"Some of the tackles and fouls were atrocious and even in the end we began to feel the same because we became frustrated with the number of stoppages."

"We seem to encounter this type of thing every time we play in Adelaide or Brisbane. In Adelaide two weeks ago we were kicked off the park and just about the same thing happened here."

"We're trying to entertain but with refereeing like this we have no chance."

Although McKendry was obviously disappointed with that aspect of the game he must have been delighted with the way his side fought back from the brink of defeat for a draw.

Alexander conceded a goal in the early minutes of both halves but showed character in not panicking and played to its strengths.

The first goal came after only five minutes when Joe Palinkas flicked on a ball crossed from the right flank by John McVeigh. The ball bounced to youngster Steve Glockner who was unmarked at the far post and had no trouble heading past keeper Jeff Oliver from close range.

The goal highlighted a serious problem in the Heidelberg defence which City exposed a number of times but failed to capitalise with goals.

The Alexander defence is very suspect to a ball knocked from well out on the flanks to the far post. Defenders appear to get dragged towards the ball and neglect attackers left behind.

McKendry conceded after the match he was aware of the problem and this week would drill his defence.

"It is probably because over the past few weeks we have concentrated on scoring goals and all our training has had an emphasis on attack and our defence has probably suffered a bit," McKendry said.

"But it is not a problem or something to worry about, it only needs our backs to be made aware."

City's second goal came from the penalty spot after ironically one of the more "softer" tackles in the game. City midfielder Bobby Hamilton ran into the box and was challenged by John Zandvoort.

The challenge may have been a bit wayward but Hamilton made the most of it and did enough to convince referee Nugent. It was one of those 50-50 decisions which this time went against the defence.

Jeff Oliver picked the right direction to dive for the kick but Willie Connor's attempt was much too well placed in the bottom corner.

At 2-0 up City looked confident and that confidence grew as Glockner nearly got another, McVeigh had a good shot brilliantly saved and Jim Tansley cleared a Hamilton shot off the line.

But then a simple mistake by McVeigh, passing wildly to Cole at the halfway line, resulted in the big man bursting away, and blasting a shot which City keeper Tony Pezzano could only palm out to Jamie Paton, who easily finished.

It was the first time Cole had looked dangerous in the game as previously each time he got the ball he was dispossessed by either Hermiston or Liddell. City pushed forward straight after the goal and had another shot cleared off the line by Zandvoort.

But from the clearance,

Cole broke again and ran from the halfway line with only Hermiston between him and the goal.

The Scotsman moved in and looked to have knocked the ball away but it fell again to Cole, many claim because of a handball, and he strode away to slot it past Pezzano.

After seeing the lead dwindle away City became nervous in the final 10 minutes and Heidelberg could have snatched a winner but for two great saves from Pezzano.

West Adelaide Hollas swept back into top four calculations with a stunning 2-1 win over Adelaide City Juventus at Hindmarsh Stadium.

It was West Adelaide's first win over City at Hindmarsh and only its second PSL win over its arch rivals.

West, beaten convincingly the week before by St. George, surprised the large crowd by dominating the first half despite the absence of Neil McGachey (suspended), Adrian Santra (injured), Alan Booth and Steve Sumner (New Zealand).

Honeyman opened the scoring, his ninth goal of the season, in 30 minutes when he hammered a solid 20 metre shot which took a decisive deflection and beat the diving Ferguson.

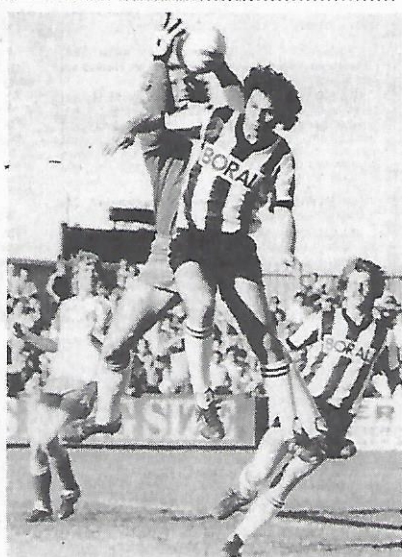

But within a minute City had won its first corner and only a clearance off the line by Zoran Maricic stopped Neville Flounders from scoring.

Adelaide City controlled the second half from the kick-off, thanks to the brilliance of Neil Banfield.

Banfield abandoned his sweeper's position and was behind almost every attacking move.

Charlie Villani, Sergio Marangoni and John Nyskohus gratefully ran into position to accept his inch perfect passes and threatened to destroy West.

But the Hawks hung on until the 77th minute when John

West Adelaide goalkeeper Martyn Crook snatches the ball from the head of Adelaide City's John Nyskohus.

Nyskohus pounced on a long, bouncing ball from Ferguson. Goalkeeper Martin Crook raced off his line but Nyskohus slid the ball into the far corner for a stunning equaliser.

The goal came at an awkward time for West which clearly had begun to panic.

City fans were rightly expecting a total collapse, but the reverse happened.

West had its best period in those final 13 minutes. The killer goal arrived in the 85th minute. Heys got around his marker, crossed to the far post for Atsals to score with a marvellous header.

On this sort of form West Adelaide is obviously going places.

City meanwhile will not only move out of the relegation zone but I believe it will finish in the top six.

APIA survives second half onslaught

APIA 3 ST. GEORGE 2

Ground: Lambert Park. Crowd: 5,259.

Scorers: Soper, Giampaolo (pen), Skeen 6.g. (A), Slater 2 (SG).

Yellow cards: M. O'Shea, Barton, Wilkinson, Pullen.

APIA: Woodhouse 7, Gray 8, McCausland 7, Pullen 7, Hughes 6, Kafka 6 (Burrows 63' - 6), Morsello 6, Butler 6, Soper 6, Giampaolo 6, Bradley 7.

ST. GEORGE: Fraser 7, Skeen 6, R. O'Shea 6, Ratcliffe 9, M. O'Shea 6, M. Barton 7, J. O'Shea 8, Stone 7, Slater 7, Wilkinson 6, Griffiths 6.

Immediately after the match ended at Lambert Park I was in pursuit of those responsible for giving me 90 minutes of soccer at the southern end of the ground — I was hoping I would have to thank the two coaches.

However, it was none of their doing.

The game as it happened was played in its entirety at the southern end with APIA managing three goals during the first half and St. George only two in the second.

After 42 minutes APIA appeared set for a comfortable win, leading 3-0, that was the score at half time. I am sure that few people at this ground would have given you odds on St. George.

It was not to be. Saints attacked from the opening whistle in the second half and had APIA in all sorts of trouble missing some good goal scoring opportunities, before netting in the 81st and 92nd minute, to make the scoreline somewhat respectable.

Slater scored following some good work by Ratcliffe from a throw in by David Skeen, then he repeated the dose after a cross by Martin went into injury time.

Alex Vesic

APIA managed to cross the centre line on a couple of occasions and almost scored. Ian Gray hit the post after a good run in the 67th, then Giampaolo beat Fraser only to see Michael O'Shea clear off the line in the 73rd minute.

Some game, you might say, or at least the second 45 minutes. During the first half it was an entirely different story with Saints unable to stop APIA scoring.

The first came after only 11 minutes after a foul by Michael Fraser on Tony Morsello. Kafka's free kick was headed home by Marshall Soper to give this Newcastle youngster a chance to run around the park and do his stuff for the fans.

After 29 minutes Mark Barton fouled John Bardley inside the penalty area and Baz Giampaolo converted the spot kick to make it 2-0.

Another free kick to APIA close to half time provided the home side with their third goal. Michael O'Shea brought down Giampaolo and from the ensuing free kick Butler found Ian Gray at the far post. Gray knocked it back into the penalty area and David Skeen's attempt to clear finished at the back of the net with Fraser stranded.

It was a miserable half for Saints who not only were down three goals including an own goal but earned three yellow cards in the process. Michael O'Shea and Paul Wilkinson for kicking the ball away and Mark Barton for a foul on Marshall Soper.

second half with obvious signs of ambition, but they were quickly nipped in the bud by the irrepressible Kosmina, who completed his hat trick in the 58th Minute.

It was then that complacency seemingly set in as Hakoah, and the replacement of Duvnjak by the skilful Joe Piccione with 30 minutes left to play promised better things for Marconi.

In fact, his shot — well saved by Clarke in the 70th minute — was the first real attempt at goal by Marconi since Jankovics' header two minutes after the start.

It was no real surprise then, when Marconi opened his account in the 73rd.

Henderson, who earlier switched to the midfield and was replaced in the rear guard by Steve Calderan, was the hero of the moment.

The big, blond Socceroo timed a run from behind with perfection to latch onto Jankovics' pass and gave Todd Clarke absolutely no chance with his shot.

Hakoah out of its lethargy and its super efficient defence easily contained Marconi for the rest of the match.

The only other notable occurrence was Socceroo skipper Murray Barnes' reappearance in place of Willie Murray who received a knock.

Barnes returned after many weeks of absence, during which he was fighting to shake of a nagging injury and came through 11 minutes of football without any visible ill effects.

The only real misfortune to strike Hakoah came in the 64th minute, when John Spanos managed to collect a yellow card after fouling leggy Marconi youngster Rene Licata.

Kevin Mullen and Joe Watson were sidelined last week for getting too many cautions and Hakoah's management must be getting exasperated about the continuing stream of yellow cards.

Luckily, there seem to be plenty of more than capable replacements available in case of injury or suspension — and this is why I tip Sydney City Hakoah to retain its PSL title

Sydney City Hakoah's only enemy on the day was its own complacency in the latter part of the second half, prior to which the phenomenon could easily have run up a five goal lead.

Marconi, on the improve in recent weeks, was once again struck by the "Horror", although starting in this match was promising for them.

In the second minute Jankovics rose like a rocket to send in a screaming header, which was cleared off the line by former team mate Jimmy Cant.

From then on it was Hakoah all the way, with the effervescence of Willie Murray a refreshing change from his many previous disappointing displays.

By the 28th Minute John Kosmina opened the scoring when he drove home across from Spanos and within two minutes he increased his tally to two.

It was from a penalty kick referee Tim Davies brought down when in full flight for the Marconi goal.

Ollerton tells of angry clashes

SCHWAB: You may not want to talk about it but before you become a coach, you had various run-ins with coaches you were under.

OLLERTON: What do you call run-ins?

SCHWAB: The confrontations with Dave MacIaren and Manny Poulakakis at Hellas and Fil Botalic at APIA.

OLLERTON: MacIaren didn't want me at Hellas. He thought I was too big for him or something. I was the top scorer in the league, I was playing well and I was captain. I had a drink with him at the bar, nothing was said at the time, but after an hour's drive home he suddenly rings to say I was finished with the club. He gave me no reason.

SCHWAB: What about Poulakakis? The story is that you hit him.

OLLERTON: I slapped his face. Not hard, though. He showed me up in front of all the players. I was talking to someone on the sidelines during training, and he called me lazy. I told him never to do that in front of the players. I told him to call me aside if he had something like that to say. I said I was a player, not a dog, and I slapped him and walked off.

SCHWAB: What about Botalic?

OLLERTON: What about him? I can't recall anything with Botalic.

SCHWAB: The story goes that you threw a cup of orange juice in his face.

OLLERTON: Oh yeah. I did. He was telling me off, putting me down in front of the players. I was a little upset, but I apologised afterwards to him and to the players. It was a spur of the moment thing and we get along very well when we see each other.

SCHWAB: You're an impetuous character. Has your own anger taught you anything about handling players who perhaps have a similar temper?

OLLERTON: I know I was labelled as a bit of a hard man. I've been in the news for eight or nine years, and I suppose it all over the world. I feel strongly about my own point of view and when something's to be said I say it. I'm always honest. I have learned how to handle players better than most coaches I've been under. I know how far to go with them, and in that, I learned a lot from within myself.

SCHWAB: Are you harder with players than the coaches you've been under?

OLLERTON: Perhaps I am a little bit. You have to be to get the best out of players.

SCHWAB: You haven't hesitated in making changes to your team. The other school of thought is that a set team should be retained for long periods regardless of individual performances, so that the team develops as a unit. How do you see it?

OLLERTON: I look at my squad and I see say, seven or eight really top players and three or four mediocre ones. If the mediocre ones do really well and the superstars don't, I'll make changes. Everyone must be given the chance to play in the side. I look to the players who'll give 100 per cent on the day. If that involves making changes, I'll make changes.

SCHWAB: Your next game is against South Melbourne Hellas at home on Sunday. What's your prediction?

OLLERTON: We've got the home ground advantage and we're a better side than Hellas. Also, we haven't got any internal problems the way they have. If they use their usual back four against our forwards we'll murder them.

SCHWAB: How do you feel about facing Tommy Docherty?

OLLERTON: He'll have to be Jesus Christ instead of Tommy Docherty because not many players down there believe in themselves any more.

Tony Vrzina — Dinamo Zagreb's Australian scout

Youngsters get chance to trial with Dinamo

Former Preston Makedonia, Croatia and Slavia coach Tony Vrzina has been appointed Australian scout for Yugoslav First Division champion Dinamo Zagreb.

Dinamo toured Australia last year and club officials were impressed with the young talent here. Soccerroo Eddie Krncevic had a successful trial with Dinamo late last year and after transferring from Marconi to Melbourne Croatia earlier this season left to join Dinamo. Krncevic came on as a substitute in Dinamo's last match of its triumphant league campaign two weeks ago and performed well.

Hellas-Hakoh winger Vlado Bozinovski and Croatia's teenage midfielder Danny Dezic recently returned from invaluable training stints with Dinamo.

Vrzina's job will be to compile dossiers on youth players across Australia and to hold regular training sessions with outstanding youngsters.

"Coaching in Australia at youth level is very erratic," said Vrzina.

"Too often under-18 players are under-coached while under-12's are over-coached."

"We must encourage the development of individual skills."

Each year Vrzina will recommend youngsters for training stints with Dinamo.

Any young players interested in being a part of this unique development program can send their biographies to Tony Vrzina, P.O. Box 456, Sunshine, Victoria, 3020.

Joe Piccione: wants to return to Victoria the Southern League in England.

Piccione to move

Joe Piccione, former Footscray J.U.S.T., Victorian and Australian midfielder, wants to leave Marconi, the club which bought him for $20,000 from J.U.S.T. last year.

Piccione regularly has been used as a midfield playmaker where his individual talents seemed best placed.

Marconi has put $9,000 on his head but the fee is negotiable.

Clubs interested can contact Piccione at home on (02) 727 7623 or at work on (02) 772 0333.

McDonald to boost Auburn

Auburn's down but not out.

The oldest club currently competing in the NSW State League is languishing on the bottom rungs of the league ladder but under the guidance of coach John McDonald it can push clear of the relegation zone.

The players are there. There's no way that Auburn has the worst first team squad in the league.

McDonald took over two weeks ago as coach, replacing Ray Smirhwalte, who coached the NSW youth team at the national titles in Canberra last week.

Smirhwalte resigned, believing that the change would be advantageous to him and the club.

McDonald retired earlier this season after a lengthy playing career with Auburn and stints with Sutherland and St. George.

His appointment as first team coach was welcomed by many players at Auburn.

McDonald has his respect, now he has to get results.

The senior players in the squad have had their responsibilities laid on the line to them by both McDonald and the committee.

If they don't respond in a few weeks time we could see some young faces appearing in the first team.

Auburn hopes that recent overseas signing, Wesley Attwell, can give its midfield the necessary attacking bite to change the course of its recent fortunes.

AROUND AUSTRALIA with CRAIG MACKENZIE

wager that at least it finished in mid-table.

Coach Mick North is half the reason why the club has come such a long way in just a decade.

North's held just about every position possible with Twin Towns. Just about every club in every league in the land has a real diehard who commits himself body and soul to improving his club. North's that type of bloke.

It's costing Twin Towns about $6,700 in travel costs to compete in the State League. That's a far cry from the $30,000 which Townsville, Across The Waves and Capricornia have to pay.

However the three northern Queensland clubs have opted to fork out the money in order to maintain their State League status.

Twin Towns secretary Bob Foster reckons that next year things will be different. He's confident that the Queensland Soccer Federation will regionalise State League into a northern and southern affair.

"That's the only way, what with the hefty cost incurred by some clubs in travel and accommodation," said Foster.

"A 12-team southern region will suit us fine next year."

"It could be made up of the southern region sides at present in State League and five clubs from the First Division in Brisbane."

"There also are a couple of South East clubs which could get into a southern region. It wouldn't surprise me to see Goodna and Rochdale gaining admission."

"When you really boil it down unless you get a really high standard competition then it's not worth the trouble of having just one statewide league in which clubs struggle to make ends meet."

Twin Towns hopes soon to announce big news about a major sponsorship deal with a local building company.

Details aren't available yet but it is believed that the club could be looking at gaining between $8,000 and $8,000 this season from the deal.

And current Brisbane Lions midfielder Mark Atmore also added to the club's bank balance last year when he left to join an American indoor side. Twin Towns gained $5,000 from the American club. Three months later Atmore was playing with English Second Division club Rotherham before joining Lions recently.

There's a lot of young talent about in the local area. Local junior clubs recognise that their most promising boys are likely to join Twin Towns to further their careers.

This nursery mentality should boost Twin Towns in the near future when the club hopes to produce a team heavily built upon Isocal products.

Wild boar Migueli

I trust that Senor Migueli isn't playing for Spain in the World Cup.

The Barcelona stopper displayed his considerable ability to mimic a wild boar with a charge and scythe-like tackle on Simon Tahamata of Standard Liege in last week's European Cup Winners' Cup final.

Let's hope that Barcelona doesn't encompass all that's "good" about Spanish soccer. If so the World Cup will turn into a real kicking affair.

We'll also get a chance to watch the intimidatory effect of a fanatic home country crowd on referees.

Juventus for title

Juventus Pioneer and White Eagles should fight out this year's State League South championship in Tassie and my money is on Juve.

Peter Brine and Eric Young are the men at Juve's coaching helm and after finishing third in last year's statewide State League the black and whites are set to go two places better in the regionalised eight-team southern league.

Brighton ICL and Launceston Juventus were the pacesetters last year but Brighton's first team squad has been severely depleted with just two of last year's members remaining. Launceston Juventus now plays in the northern league.

That leaves the way open for Juventus Pioneer to clinch the 1982 title.

The club has been going for 22 years and the Pioneer company put up about $1,200 this year in sponsorship.

Juventus' match payments and signing-on fees are as good as any in the league. Importantly, no players get more than others. Juve believes in paying its first team players the same wage irrespective of talent and it's a policy which is paying dividends as team spirit and harmony within the squad is high.

Juventus Pioneer was one of the clubs which lobbied strongly to maintain the statewide nature of State League.

Was Malvinas at fault?

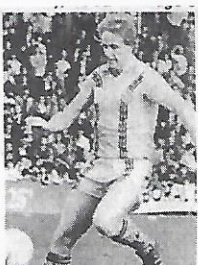

This story has been going the rounds for quite some time, but recent events have given it renewed topicality:

As we all remember only too well, fighting British and Argentine fans produced horrendous scenes during the Coca Cola Championship last year.

The following day a Sydney soccer journalist received an urgent cable from a Buenos Aires newspaper: "Did riot concern Malvinas?"

"No," the Sydney cable read, "he wasn't playing."

Soccer's sticking on with stars galore

Gary Cole — a star of today.

Leo Baumgartner — star of yesterday.

Mike Johnson

Is there really a shortage of personalities in Australian soccer?

How many times have you read that claim in the Press, or heard it on television? It was aired again recently by "Soccer Action" writer Peter Scott who was looking for reasons for the drop in attendances at soccer games in Australia.

I never have agreed with those who state that there are no personalities today in soccer and other sports.

It is illogical to consider that the modern sportsman is incapable of becoming a "personality" like his predecessors who apparently exuded the charisma, magnetism and talent which produced "star" quality.

Are there in fact, as Peter Geoff suggests, no players in Australia with the "impulse" of former greats Leo Baumgartner, Jim Kelly or former Greek idol Loukanides?

I believe there are.

Jim Hermiston is a better player than Jim Kelly and may in time have as big an impact as a coach.

Young Mark Koussas will in time have an even bigger following than Loukanides among the Sydney Olympic crowd.

Branko Juljevic has been displaying skills in Melbourne for many years comparable with those displayed by Baumgartner though must confess without the explosive shooting ability.

Gary Cole, scorer of seven goals in an international game — a world record for the World Cup — is a star by any yardstick.

He is big — and I am sure beautiful from a woman's point of view.

Indeed he is a magnificent athlete, oozing power and pace. He is also effective as his goal scoring record shows. His team mate, the wee dynamo Jimmy Rooney is another personality player, as are South Melbourne's Alan Evans, George Campbell and youngster Alan Davidson and what of Scottish extrovert Doug Brown at Preston Madeonia.

John Kosmina has star quality if ever any player could be accorded that accolade. Like Cole he is a great player, certainly by Australian standards and probably as effective as Leo Baumgartner ever was.

I played in part of the "golden era" of Australian soccer, appearing in the 1963 NSW Grand Final for Jim Kelly's South Coast United against Baumgartner's APIA which attracted a record gate of 30,000 people, with thousands locked outside.

Thus I have played against and watched Baumgartner and while having enormous admiration for this ability I also have been very closely involved with Kosmina and observed his progress over the years.

The conclusion I reach when comparing these two fine players is that Kosmina is as effective as Baumgartner.

Kosmina, like Cole, is a magnificent but athlete and a handsome man to boot so you discover if you are in his presence for any time because of the number of complimentary female glances that come his way.

If Kosmina and Cole and others like him do not attain the "star" status that went the way of Jim Kelly and Leo Baumgartner it is because of the change in modern society not some deficiency in ability or personality.

No pop idol today receives the adulation which was accorded for so many years to Bing Crosby or Frank Sinatra.

That is because modern society is in such a state of flux, with constant change and a constant show of new faces thrown up at us in newspapers and on television.

No one person can command enough single attention for a long enough period of time to attain the awesome star status of a Betty Grable, John Wayne or Humphrey Bogart.

It is interesting that the movie makers also bemoan the lack of stars in their industry.

But it is society that has changed, not the pop singers, movie idols or soccer stars.

They are all part of the accelerating kaleidoscope of personalities and events that pass before our eyes each day, unlike in the days when the world seemed to revolve around Betty Grable, Winston Churchill, General De Gaulle, Stanley Mathews, Ferenc Puskas, Don Bradman and Jesse Owens.

In order to make our modern soccer stars into "personalities" in the eyes of the public they need to be constantly promoted, a point Peter Scott mentioned.

They need to be constantly exposed on television and in the other media so that their names and presence become as familiar as Kellogg's Cornflakes.

That costs money! The question the clubs have to ask themselves is whether such intensive player promotion would bring sufficient extra people into games to pay for the cost of promoting the "star".

When the world almost disappeared to revolve around Betty Grable promotion of such stars was free, once the original impact was made.

The star status was then perpetuated with free publicity because there was not much else of interest to put before the public.

Today the whole world and the galaxies are there to be observed and intrigued by.

It would take considerable money to make an Australian soccer player grab hold of the attention of the fickle public for more than a brief time.

Soccer in Australia IS improving!

I make this emphatic statement in reply to many people within the game who seem to consider otherwise.

Several prominent coaches to whom I spoke recently perturbed me by saying that the standard of soccer was deteriorating.

If you look at the situation carefully it is obvious that this is not the case.

I will do that in a minute, but first, just on a philosophical basis, I run against the trend of human experience to suggest a sport which is increasing in numbers of participants each year would go backward.

Huddle, Allen the key men

The English FA Cup Final between Spurs and QPR will be shown live on Australian TV from late on Saturday night.

The players are:

QUEEN'S PARK RANGERS

PETER HUCKER: Made his first team debut last year after 4 seasons in the reserves and subsequently made the number one jersey his own. Was called up for the England under-21 squad recently.

TERRY FENWICK: A key figure in Crystal Palace's rise to the First Division in 1978. Transferred to Queen's Park Rangers for £250,000 in December, 1981, he is equally at home in the back four or midfield. He has been capped five times by England at international level.

IAN GILLARD: A stylish full back, who has been at Loftus Road for 15 years. Gained three caps for England in the mid '70s. This 31 year old has made over 400 league appearances for Rangers.

GARY WADDOCK: Although English born, midfielder Waddock qualifies for the Elre national team through his parents, and has represented the Republic four times.

BOB HAZELL: Earlier in his career, had one of the worst disciplinary records in English football. He has quietened down and is now one of the game's most dependable central defenders.

This Jamaican born England under-21 international cost the club $450,000 when Tommy Docherty bought him from Wolverhampton Wanderers in September, 1979.

GLEN ROEDER: Former England 8 player. Roeder is a resolute defender with a penchant for scoring goals. Was the subject of a $250,000 fee when he moved from Orient in August, 1979.

TONY CURRIE: The "forgotten man" of English football, Currie has established himself in the England senior team while at Leeds when he had to return to his native London for family reasons. Newly relegated Queens' Park Rangers paid a club record $200,000 for him and in the obscurity of the Second Division his international career was terminated.

MIKE FLANAGAN: Rejected by Tottenham as a youth, Flanagan found fame and the back of the net at Charlton and Crystal Palace before becoming a Ranger for $250,000. He has represented England at level.

CLIVE ALLEN: Only now returning to his normal form after the trauma of two million pound transfers while still a teenager. A member of a formidable footballing family — cousin Paul has already won a cup winners' medal, as has his father; ironically with Spurs!

SIMON STAINROD: A rarity in English football — an individualist who loves to demonstrate his remarkable dribbling abilities. Previously something of a rebel, he has benefited from the guidance of manager Terry Venables. Towards the top of the goal-scoring charts for much of the season, he was a $500,000 buy from Oldham last November.

JOHN GREGORY: A key figure in Brighton's rise before moving to London last July at $600,000. A utility player, he has also served Northampton and Aston Villa.

GARRY MICKLEWHITE: Played superbly in the semi final when stepping in for the injured Gregory. He saw service on the substitutes' bench at Wembley. Failed to make the grade at the midweek transfer and moved South last year.

TERRY VENABLES (manager): Was capped at all levels by England. He saw service at Chelsea, Tottenham Hotspur, Queens' Park Rangers and Crystal Palace. Won an FA Cup with Tottenham after the first all London final (1967). Took up the managerial reins at Palace in 1978 and then from the Third to First Division. Then Palace collapsed dramatically and Venables moved to Queens' Park Rangers. At Loftus Road for just over 18 months, his work is already bearing fruit.

TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR

RAY CLEMENTE: One of the World's top dozen goalkeepers, Clemente has brought stability to the Spurs defence since his $500,000 transfer from Liverpool last August.

An England squad member since 1978, he has won all available domestic honors, plus European Cup and UEFA Cup winners' medals from Liverpool.

CHRIS HUGHTON: An attacking full back, born in London of a West Indian father and Irish mother, he became the first colored player to represent Elre when making his international debut in 1980.

GRAHAM ROBERTS: Rejected by home town club Southampton as a youth, he reaped his revenge upon the Saints by scoring a hat trick against them earlier this season. Used either in midfield or as central defender, he joined Spurs from non-league Weymouth for a mere $70,000 in 1980.

PAUL PRICE: Captain of the Welsh international team, a $500,000 buy from Luton Town almost exactly a year ago, he is a steady centre back.

MIKE HAZARD: A goal scoring midfielder, who has forced his way into the side through a series of magnificent performances. He joined Spurs at a 15-year-old apprentice in 1976.

STEVE PERRYMAN: Probably the finest uncappped player in English football, Perryman was recently acclaimed "Footballer of the Year". An inspirational captain, with over 200 league appearances to his name, he is one of the club's finest servants. Honored by England at under 21 level 17 times, he has been included in his country's provisional squad of 40 for the World Cup.

GARY BROOKE: Arrides' return to Argentina has enabled Brooke to claim a team place as the final nears. His appearances this season have been restricted by injuries. Only 5'8" tall, he is a non-stop runner and possesses a powerful shot.

STEVE ARCHIBALD: Almost certain to be a key man in Scotland's World Cup campaign, Archibald was the first division's leading goalscorer last season with Peter White.

Arrived received $1,600,000 when he moved to Spurs in May, 1980 — a club record and also the highest ever Anglo-Scottish transaction.

TONY GALVIN: A 25-year-old left winger, he was sidelined at being consistently denied international honors by England, delved into his family background and discovered his grandmother was born in Elre. He has now made himself available for the Republic. Joined Spurs from Northern Premier Leagueurs Gole Town in 1978.

GLEN HODDLE: The great white hope of English soccer, Huddle has the elegant skills nearly associated with the greats of Continental Europe and Latin America. An elusive ball carrier, who can swerve the ball and has the ability to make a real impression during the World Cup.

SAMMY CROOKS: After missing much of the season with a knee injury, Crooks has bounced back to his best form. A powerful front runner, it was $1,300,000 that brought him to Spurs from Stoke, where he was born of a Jamaican parent.

RICHARD VILLA: Missed the semi final through injury and the current political situation may deprive him of an appearance at Wembley, where he was the match-winner last year. Racing Club released him for $750,000 in 1978, shortly after he helped Argentina win the World Cup. This elegant ball carrier and distributor was a surprise omission from the Gauchers' 1982 squad.

PAUL MILLER: A powerful central defender, Miller has recently established himself in the North Londoners' back four. He joined Spurs, his only club, in 1977.

McSkimming helped Spiders rise

Called at various times Bob, Rob or Bobby, but registered as Robert Shields McSkimming, Brisbane Lions' newcomer experienced seven seasons of Scottish League soccer before emigrating to Australia.

Born in Johnstone, Renfrewshire, he joined Queen's Park from Glasgow junior side Spurs Boys' Club at the tail end of the 1974-75 season and was drafted into the first team almost immediately.

Queen's Park is unique in the fact that it is the only amateur team operating in senior British soccer. Its home ground is the 64,000 capacity Hampden Park, but rarely attracts attendances of over a thousand!

It was in this uninspiring atmosphere that McSkimming was to establish himself as one of the most consistent right backs among the league's lower ranks.

The highlight of his career in Scotland undoubtedly was Park's Second Division championship success of last year. This was the first honor achieved by the "Spiders", so nicknamed because of their think black and white hooped shirts, in 25 years.

To make the season even more notable, McSkimming doubled the number of goals he scored in senior soccer — four! Both proved to be match-winners.

Realising that, at 25 years of age, he was unlikely to receive offers from professional clubs, the qualified engineer decided that Australia offered greater prospects than depressed Scotland.

In total he made 193 first team appearances for Queens' Park.

A chance meeting with Joe Gilroy, who was coach at Hampden during the early period of McSkimming's time there, led to the two joining force again.

A solid performer, he is a sharp, no-nonsense tackler, whose razor like reflexes also are an asset in his favorite sport — table tennis.

McSkimming is likely to be a key figure in a Lions defence endeavouring to fill the awesome void left by Jim Hermiston.

MORWELL FALCONS 0 HELLAS-HAKOAH 1 (Cummings)

FALCONS: Whitehead 7 - Smart 7, Irvine 7 (in), Daniels 7 (in), Higham 7, Neale 9 - Perkins 6 (in), Lecky 35th 7, O'Callaghan 6, Diggle 6 - Mitten 6, McCluskey 6, T. van Buer 7.

HELLAS-HAKOAH: TSIGARIS - Davidson 6, Hancock 6, Kallididis 8, Wilson 7 - Cummings 7, Kekatos 6, Jordanou 6 - Bitsonis (Adams 30th 6), Patsakos 5 (Traficante 20th), Rooney 6.

A group of Morwell Falcons supporters no doubt rejoiced when player-coach Dave O'Connor wasn't in the starting line-up or on the bench against Hellas-Hakoah on Saturday.

This is the same group of supporters who have strangely taken it upon themselves to heckle O'Connor and call for his replacement in recent times whenever he has selected himself in the starting line-up.

Obviously none of these so-called supporters travelled to Meebourne two weeks ago to watch Falcons go down 2-1 to Juventus. O'Connor clearly was Falcons' best midfielder in that game and it's in the middle where Falcons have fallen down badly recently.

O'Connor can contribute to Falcons on the field so his decision last Saturday not to even put himself on the bench was curious.

However former Swindon Town midfielder John Barr arrived on Monday to bolster O'Connor's side. If games were decided solely on chances created then Hellas-Hakoah would have been decisively beaten.

It really was a comedy of errors up front for Falcons. John O'Callaghan played a through ball in the second half which set up a race between Falcons striker Tony van Bar and Hellas-Hakoah keeper Lou Tsigras. The pair collided, the ball ran to Tommy Lecky who shot first time against the bar with a gaping goal in front of him. Sweeper Sandy Irvine was carried off on a stretcher in the 75th minute. The former Australian international was struck a hard blow on a kneecap and his loss caused a considerable positional reshuffle. Nigel Daniels came on and went into Midfield, Peter Diggle, dropped back to centre half and John Higham took over as sweeper. Just when it seemed that frustrated Falcons would have to settle for a draw, Hellas-Hakoah struck its telling blow.

Duncan Cummings dummied a shot in the 89th minute. Diggle turned away, then Cummings rounded him and neatly placed the ball past the despairing grasp of Bill Whitehead.

Hellas-Hakoah could sign 21 year old Scottish striker Eddie Gray who played in the last two Junior Scottish Cup Finals and was on the books of First Division club Kilmarnock.

NORTHCOTE 0 AJAX 2 (Macleod 2)

NORTHCOTE: Giannopoulos 7, Nelson 7, Bozakis 7, Provan 7, Petroski 6 - Falco 6, Wright 7, Rujovic 6 (Barboroglou 80th) - Sahinidis 7, Bol 6 (Koulekas H.T. 6), Glavits 6.

AJAX: Denys 7 - Peter Lewis 7, Gardiner 7, Connell 7, Hogben 7 - Bennett 6, Veselko 7, Green 6 (Wallace H.T. 7) - Macleod 6, Paul Lewis 6 (Smellman 84th), Williams 6.

Norhtcote is keen to sign former Scottish international defender Peter Dixon from Queen of the South.

Dixon was capped for Scotland's under-23 side against Holland in the early 1970s and also played for the Scottish League against the English League.

Norhtcote's new coach is former Sydney Croatia player Billy Millen.

Rumors abound though that Tony Vyzina could take over as manager.

Ajax hit the post twice within seven minutes at John Cain Reserve on Sunday but Norhtcote almost opened the scoring when Ayden Bol was thrown only to be foiled by a superb save from Lou Denys.

Five minutes before the break Ajax hit the front. Peter Lewis overlapped down the right and crossed for post where Gus Macleod rose high to head into the far corner.

Ajax had to wait until the 80th minute to increase its lead. David Smallman replaced injured Paul Lewis and man played the ball to Peter Lewis, who missed. The Ajax right back tried to turn but was brought down by Angelo Petrakos. Macleod, Ajax's regular penalty taker, made no mistake from the spot.

Three votes are awarded to the best player of each club in every State League game. These votes are awarded on the basis of "Secrecy Action" ratings and the judgement of the opposition coach. This voting format was arrived at by the State League management committee.

The best players from each club for last weekend's game were: Ringwood Wilhelmina v George Cross: Joe Carroll (RW), Bobby Tol (GC).

Norhtcote v Green Gully Ajax: Jim Sahinidis (N), Gus Macleod (GGA).

Albion Rovers v Juventus: Ken Smart (AR), Tony Heery (J), Morwell Falcons v Hellas-Hakoah: David Neale (MF), Lou Tsigras (H-H).

Pressure on Vella to change team for big Cup clash

George Cross could drastically reshuffle its line-up for Sunday's important Dockerty Cup clash with Ajax at Green Gully Reserve.

Pressure is mounting on George Cross coach Tony Vella to include Billy Wilkinson and Hugh McCann in the starting line-up and to play Laurie Blusic at centre half in place of dependable Norm Maitland.

Wilkinson is fit after a long injury lay off and a few George Cross players would like to see him and McCann reinstated. Should Wilkinson and McCann both play against Ajax they will find themselves in midfield alongside Dave Rigby.

However, it's hard to see the changes stopping Ajax from knocking arch rival Cross out of this year's cup.

Should Blusic play stopper he'll find Gully's galloping goal machine big Gus Macleod a real handful.

No doubt though Ajax must watch Bobby Tol and Carl Gilder closely. This pair are starting to knit together. Both are quality performers capable of turning it on, especially in such an important cup clash between two old foes.

Croydon should beat undermanned Albion City in the first game of the double header at Green Gully Reserve.

Although Croydon coach Ken Kontra still is waiting for the chance to field his strongest line-up Albion will be without Nat Little who broke his ankle earlier this season and talented Steve Jones, also injured.

Youngster Joe Vohar probably will play as Albion's central striker and although the teenager is a big, strong lad he won't get much change out of experienced Steve McCombe.

Albion's best avenue to goal could be through elusive right winger Steve O'Boyle but it's hard to see State League Croydon getting tossed.

Centenary Park in North Frankston could be the scene of the major cup upset.

Home team Frankston City, although languishing at the foot of State League should account for Second Division Werribee but the second game of this double header spells danger for Morwell Falcons.

Frankston Pines are a spirited, tough outfit and with Mick McGorian, George Malcolm and young Brian Keenan up front can put State League newcomer Falcons under the hammer.

I'm tipping Pines to win by a hair's breadth. That's provided that former Hellas, Albion, Frankston and Croatia winger Noel Mitten is kept under wraps by the Pines defence. Mitten was one of Falcons' best in their 1-0 defeat by Hellas-Hakoah on Saturday but Centenary Park is the scene of some of his best goal scoring feats since coming to Australia in the late 70s.

Another cup upset looms at Raleigh Reserve where Western Suburbs and Doveton clash in the first match.

Suburbs feature former Ajax winger Andy Segi, target man Mick Klarin and ex-Albion Rovers striker Stuart Gilmour.

That's a formidable strike force for a First Division outfit and with player-coach Bill Vojtek, ex-Slavia star Steve Moore and former Polonia player Eddie Kupisz in midfield Suburbs are set to give the Doves a torrid time.

Coach Vojtek is likely to assign a marker for Alan Quin, the man he sees as Suburbs' biggest threat.

Polonia and Albion meet in the second match and home side Polonia should just edge out its local rival.

Polonia coach Kaz Kowalec may use experienced Stefan Mila as sweeper, setting Albion a sizeable task to break down Polonia's defensive discipline.

Janusz Przybyla is the man Albion must watch closely. He's sharp, skilful and packs a powerful shot. These qualities could be Albion's undoing on Sunday.

Olympic Park is the venue for the best double header of the round.

Juventus and Wilhelmina clash in the first match with Croatia running into Sunshine in the second game.

There's little between the first game contestants.

John Luyten probably will mark big Graham French leaving the experienced Billy de Graaf as the spare man at the back for Wilhelmina.

Tony Heery has been playing well for Juve in recent weeks, now that he's showing more inclination to run to defenders and try and get in behind him. There's no doubt that Heery's clever ball skills could break up Wilhelmina's organisation at the back.

Fabio Incantulupo will be back from the youth titles so coach Tony Boggi will be able to field his strongest combination.

The battle between Peter Donaldson and Joe Carroll could hold the key to Wilhelmina's fortunes.

With little confidence I've gone for Juventus.

Sunshine knocked Croatia out of last year's Dockerty Cup so Sunday's game gives Bill McArthur's outfit the chance to turn the tables.

Croatia should win. Ossi Latif should return to the right wing. Like Incantulupo the explosive Latif was contesting the youth titles last weekend.

Dave Brogan may be too quick for either Rob Gramsbergen or Nick Lowe but little Jim McRobert, if he lines up at left back, won't give anything away against Latif.

Croatia could hold the upper hand in midfield where Josp Biskic and Jeff Faulkner start most of its forward moves.

Polonia coach Kaz Kowalec may use experienced Stefan Mila as sweeper, setting Albion a sizeable task to break down Polonia's defensive discipline.

International series next year, summer sweat still shelved

All these proposals will be studied by a PSL committee which is yet to be formed. But any decisions will have to be ratified by the ASF, and the ASF will have none of it. It would argue that it would be unfair to all State Leagues if the PSL became a closed shop for two years and that, after all, the league had a chance to consolidate in its first two seasons - 1977 and 1978 - when relegation did not apply.

Philips Cup goes for big money

Instead of making a formal draw, the PSL has selected first-round Philips Cup games to maximise gates. The first round will be played on June 14, and it includes a host of local derbies between old rivals. The draw is:

and that the promotion-relegation problem would remain a burning issue for some time. Summer soccer however, was finally given the death-knell. The league also agreed to a two-week break next year to accommodate an international tournament between Australia, New Zealand and two European or South American teams.

Queensland's title

Queensland, runner-up last year, is 1982 Australian under-19 soccer champion after a crushing 4-1 defeat of NSW in Canberra on Sunday. Queensland, easily the biggest side in the competition, shrugged off a controversial first minute incident to thoroughly deserve the victory.

The game was just 60 seconds old when NSW forward Ian Rodrigues caught Queensland's goalkeeper Stuart Woodruff to equalise. Just three minutes later Queensland's best forward, Frank Farina, shot his side ahead with a well-placed drive from 10 metres. But NSW jubilation was short-lived as Victorian referee Jim Fokianos blew for offside.

Queensland skipper Russell Stewart made it 3-1 in the 27th minute when his well-struck shot cannoned off the post and into the net. Midway through the second half liveview Queensland midfielder Mick Gerritsen appeared to have made it 4-1 but his effort was given offside. However, a superb free kick by Steven Jackson in the 20th minute of the second half crossed the goal line to complete Queensland's scoring.

In other games on Sunday South Australia defeated the ACT 4-0 after a penalty shootout, Northern NSW defeated Tasmania 4-0 and Victoria trounced Western Australia 3-0, with Ossie Latif netting a hat-trick. Queensland was put into the final thanks to an own goal by Victoria in the semis. Defender Danny Beranic sent the ball into his own net in a sad end to Victoria's bid for a berth in the final.

It was tragic luck for the Victorians, who outplayed their physically bigger and more robust Queensland opponents. New South Wales made the final thanks to a superbly taken penalty by their skipper Tom McCulloch. It gave NSW a deserved 1-0 victory over pre-tournament favourite, West Australia. New South Wales, despite the absence of several youngsters with PSL experience, was always the more constructive and disciplined side. Yet McCulloch's 28th minute goal was its first real chance of the first half. It came after a late tackle on Ian Rodrigues, and McCulloch placed his shot well wide of West Australia's goal-keeper Anthony Frankan.

Frankan showed superb reflexes late in the second half to save a penalty range shot from New South Wales forward Michael McCulloch. Beranic was in tears at the end of the Queensland-Victoria second semi-final. Just five minutes from the final Michael Beranic headed a free kick by Queensland defender Steven Jackson into his own net. Yet it was Victoria that had been the more purposeful and decisive team. Early in the first half its best forward, Fabio Incantapulo, led the woodwork and his header from the rebound had Queensland goal-keeper Stuart Woodruff pull off a scintillating save.

Playoff results:
SA 3 (McIntyre, 2, Konstopoulos) Tasmania 1 (Hunter).
ACT 2 (Espinoza, 2) Northern NSW 1 (Malar).
Victoria's results:
v South Australia 1-0. Score: White.
v Western Australia 1-3. Score: Latif.
v ACT 2-0. Score: Latif.
v Queensland 0-1. (semi-final).
v Western Australia 3-0. Score: Latif 3 (3rd place playoff only).

Eagles flying high

White Eagles lead Tasmania's Cadbury State League (South) by two points after beating Juventus 2-1 in an uninspiring game on Sunday. Juventus had the better of a scoreless first half with Bruce Ward missing three excellent chances of putting his side in front. Ten minutes into the second half, Boswell's low cross-cum-shot from the right edged the Juventus defence and Nick Dracovic hit a superb first time effort into the net from the edge of the area to put White Eagles in front. Fourteen minutes later, Eagles were awarded a penalty after Brine unpeeled the young Crawford. Michniewski, the

Has Villa the nerve to attack Bayern?

Caution is the key to Aston Villa's hopes of continuing English domination of the European Cup for a sixth successive year when it tries to topple crack West German machine Bayern Munich next week.

The game will be televised live by Channel 0/28 from 4.15am next Thursday.

Bayern certainly won't be overawed by one of the grandest occasions in world club soccer.

Midfielders Paul Breitner and Bernd Durnberger played in Bayern's first Champions' Cup triumph, a 4-0 replay win over Atletico Madrid in Brussels in 1974. Defender Udo Horsmann and striker Karl-Heinz Rummenigge played in the 1-0 victory over Saint-Etienne at Hampden Park in 1976.

Sandwiched between those victories was a remarkable 2-0 win against Leeds United in Paris in 1975.

The second triumph was highlighted by Bayern's ability to soak up almost 70 minutes of pressure before swiftly striking back and catching Leeds on the break twice in the last 10 minutes of the match.

Discipline, organisation and patience are the hallmarks of this superb West German side. Let's not forget that in world class performers like Breitner and Rummenigge the Germans also possess two men with abundant imagination and flair.

Against those qualities is pitted an inexperienced Villa side contesting its first Champions' Cup final.

The Germans though are well advised not to underestimate their opponents, a lesson they learned last year when they carried a 0-0 away result against Liverpool back to Germany confident that the second leg of the 1981 semi-final was a mere formality.

Liverpool proved the Germans wrong.

Villa must be careful not to become absorbed by glee toward all costs. The ability of Bayern to counter attack is awesome.

That's why caution is the keynote of Villa's fortunes.

The English though, go into the Rotterdam encounter as underdogs. The Germans are expected to press forward and pin Villa inside its defensive half for lengthy periods, and this could suit the Birmingham based team.

Blood Villa winger Tony Morley is the man who could cause most problems for the Germans - Capped twice for England, his speed and dribbling ability enable him to beat opponents and get in behind the defence where he poses the biggest threat to Bayern's organisation at the back.

And it is in defence that the Germans appear weakest. Bertramer, Belterlorer, Hans Weiner, Klaus Augenthaler and Hossman certainly isn't a distinguished unit.

Hungarian coach Pal Csernai was fuming over his defence when Bayern went 3-0 down in minutes to CSKA Sofia in the semi-final first leg. Just 10 days later Bayern went down 4-3 to Eintracht Frankfurt in an important Bundesliga clash.

The Germans are so concerned over their goalkeeping position that they have been spying on Austrian keeper Klaus Lindenberger. It's probable that young Walter Jungians will be in Bayern's goal even though he has shown a penchant for unpredictable errors of late.

Villa is likely to use English international Peter Withe as its target man up front with elusive Gary Shaw working off him. Morley probably will be allowed to switch wings though should Villa adopt a cautious approach, which wouldn't surprise in view of the quality of the opposition, then Morley may play on the fees also go to the pension fund.

Tottenham Hotspur, the FA Cup-holder which meets Queens Park Rangers in this year's final, is reported to be interested in Michel Platini's midfield mate with St Etienne, Jean Francois Larios. Spurs see him as a successor to "lost" Argentine star Ossie Ardiles. Like Platini, Larios is a World Cup player.

At the end of April, 143 players had been sent off in England's Football League. FA Cup and League Cup games this season - 25 more than the all-time record at the same stage last year.

Kevin Keegan had to withdraw from the England side which beat Wales 1-0 recently. The former Liverpool and SV Hamburg star now with Southampton, was found stuck in an awkward position in the bathroom of his hotel. The English team doctor said Keegan's back had locked when he bent down to put the bath plug in. Ron Greenwood was very concerned and there are hints the injury may cast doubts on Keegan's World Cup prospects.

Phil Woosnam, the former Aston Villa and Welsh international who has been the big shot in his role as Commissioner of the North American Soccer League, is likely to have his duties scaled down "soccer related" matters only and the executive post passed on to a North American versed in marketing techniques. Woosnam, now 49, has been tireless in his efforts for the game in North America for the past 15 years.

Ricky Villa, the other half of the Ardiles Argentinian double still plugging away for Spurs despite the critical situation between Britain and his country, is determined to stay put in London come what may. His wife is expecting their second child any lick of the clock and Villa is also desperate to play for Spurs in the FA Cup Final against QPR this Saturday. Villa still has another year of his contract to run and he would like to stay and fulfil it.

West Germany's midfield star Hansi Muller has said his prospects of playing in the World Cup are "not favourable" after a medical check on his injured knee.

Frank McGrath, 22, who has been voted Republic of Ireland's Footballer of the Year, has joined Manchester United from St Patrick's.

Roy Hodgson has been sacked after only four months as manager of Bristol City. New boss is likely to be Terry Cooper the former Leeds and England defender who was sacked earlier this season as manager of Bristol Rovers and who is currently playing for his old Elland Road team-mate Billy Bremner at Doncaster Rovers.

Glasgow Rangers' fan Eddie Paterson has, with the aid of his union, won a battle with his firm to get a month off work to go to Spain and support Scotland in the World Cup. The firm originally said he could only have two weeks off.

Quini grabs the winner

Barcelona of Spain won the European Cup Winners Cup for the second time in three years when it beat Belgian champion Standard Liege 2-1 in an ill-tempered final in Barcelona last week.

Barcelona, displaying all the uncompromising tactics that have earned it an unsavoury reputation in European football, finally overcame its nerves to defeat the more talented Belgian side.

Standard looked as if it was going to put the seal on Barcelona's nightmare season when it grabbed the lead in the eighth minute through Guy Vandermiesen.

But Barcelona, which let the Spanish title slip away after looking uncatchable, equalised against the run of play right on half-time when tiny Danish striker Allan Simonsen outjumped the Standard defence to head a precious goal.

Veteran Spanish international Enrique Castro Qui scored the winner in the 63rd minute after Simonsen put him through with a free kick which appeared to be taken when West German referee Walter Eschweiler was not looking.

Eschweiler allowed the goal despite protests by the Liege team. He booked five players and sent off Standard defender Walter Meuwens seconds before blowing the final whistle.

Teams, with ratings:
BARCELONA: Urrusti 7, Gerardo 7, Miguel 8, Menolo 8, Sanchez 7, Alencar 7, Simonsen 8, Montali 7, Quini 8, Esteban 8, Carrasco 7.

Croatia wallops Canterbury, Yugal's flourishing

NSW State League with ALEX VESIC

Croatia walloped Canterbury at King Tomislav Park to keep top spot in State League, while Riverwood just edged Polonia at Choppin Park to keep nudging and hoping for Croatia to slip up.

Blacktown Demons won, but there were cries of "we wuz robbed" from Yugal after the referee abruptly extended the game for over five minutes during which Blacktown scored the winning goal. Yugal also was hampered by the fact that David McIntosh was sent off early giving Blacktown a distinct advantage.

Manly Warringah, the top scoring outfit in the league with 33 goals continued to pick up points but coach Mick Jones was fuming over missed opportunities in the closing stage at Cromer Park despite a healthy 3-1 win over Rockdale.

So the battle royal is about to start. Melita beat Sutherland and still is claiming that it will be amongst the top four at the end. Someone suggested that president Emanuel Saed was on holidays and did not see Melita bounce back to form with a fine 4-2 win over Sutherland. Following this result it appears that some of the committee members are willing to propose that Saed stay a few weeks longer in the sun.

Next week we are going to be in for a classic derby. Croatia travels to Gabbie Stadium for yet another crack at Rast's Demons. Their last battle was won on penalties in the semi-final of the Ampol Cup. At Blacktown, the claims of "it was irregular" are still loud.

Those are the ingredients needed for a great match and we are certainly in for it. A bumper crowd is expected and will get its money's worth in soccer entertainment.

Rockdale will entertain Auburn, while Sutherland hopes to pick up points against Polonia at Seymour Shaw Park. Avala, still smarting from two horrible humiliations last year against Manly Warringah, hopes to do much better this time at Knight Park.

Riverwood easily could be perched at the top following its match against JM United at Hurstville on Sunday.

MANLY ROCKDALE 3 1

Scorers: Noble, Fox, Falconer (MW), Matheson (R).
Manly: Ellis, K. Falconer, Doyle, Dick, Geoghean, Lock, Noble, Peter Falconer, T. Smith, Regan, Stuart (Fox 70').

Rockdale: Bonavia, Fraser, Matheson, J. Bottalico, O'Rourke, B. Smith, Levine, Wilson, A. Bottalico, Pilovski, Trajanovski (62' Morrell).

Manly continues to entertain and score goals and in the process keeps collecting points.

Relentless Sea Eagles continued their winning form at Cromer Park beating this listless Rockdale Hinder side by three goals to one.

Only twice during the entire game did Manly allow Rockdale to get on even keel.

Apart from those two short periods Manly dominated the game controlling the midfield and generally being far the more constructive and dangerous. Their defence was strong with Doyle and Dick standing too tall and too strong for anything Rockdale could throw at them, while Peter Falconer provided the backbone of Manly's attack with pin point passes from midfield.

Those first 10 minutes did not show the difference the league table would have you to believe exists between the two sides. Then, slowly but surely, Rockdale was giving away their midfield tasks and allowing Manly to dominate.

Midway through the first half Stuart found Regan on the flank and a subsequent cross led to Manly's opener. Gary Noble accepted the deflection off a Rockdale defender to drive home from close range.

Manly continued to dominate and with six minutes remaining in the first half struck again. Stuart and Regan combined again to provide the opportunity for Falconer to score through a wall of legs.

A freak goal by Matheson (all Manly's goals in the 68th minute. Rockdale was given a free kick some 40 metres from goal. Matheson took the kick with most players away at the far post. Manly's keeper, Ellis, made the error in judgement, forgetting that Manly forward could have a shot at goal and went for the ball far too late to do anything about a shot which finished in the roof of the net at the nearest.

Rockdale, lead by Matheson's example swamped Manly during the next seven minutes, but without success, then with 15 minutes to go Manly struck again. Dudley Fox broke through to score and make it 3-1.

From then on it was a case of Manly on top again with Beaves in goal for Rockdale having to make numerous saves from Manly forwards. Keith Falconer and Bruce Doyle drove from behind to give Manly that extra power up front but with Beaves in great form, Manly could do little to increase the lead.

For Rockdale it was a fifth straight defeat, despite the additions of some new names in the last few weeks - Lorinc, Bobby Smith, Trajanovski and A. Bottalico.

SUTHERLAND 2 MELITA EAGLES 4

Scorers: Allan 2, McCoy, Budini (ME), Clinch, Beggs (S).
Melita: McPherson, R. Williams, Ankudnoff, McClinton, McCoy, Cross, Jamieson, Farrugia, Budini (Patterson), Allan, Vial (Parker).

SUTHERLAND: Haynes, Heaford, Cashman, Schaefer, Schumann, Groom, Harrington, Meadows, Clinch, Beggs, Bush.

Melita Eagles, for time lofers in as many weeks, came to Seymour Shaw Park looking for both points and were soon on top. They created early openings but poor shooting coupled with some good defensive work by the home side saw Sutherland safely through.

Then came a fine goal by Shane Clinch to give Sutherland the lead, but Melita came back to strike through Don Allan. With the score locked at 0-0, Melita had an opportunity to go into the lead but Greg McCoy who hit the upright from a penalty kick.

At the other end, Peter Beggs scored from a penalty to send Sutherland into a one goal lead at half time.

However, the second half performance by Sutherland defence left a lot to be desired as Melita stormed home looking for goals: Allan, Budini and Greg McCoy scored for the visitors to put those smiles back in the Eagles camp. It was a well deserved victory with Bobby McGinn certainly the inspiration at Melita, with Cross, Jamieson and Farrugia the driving force in the middle of the park.

Johnny Watkiss, for the second successive week, has ended up without a point.

"I am unhappy about the fact that we lost, as anyone would be, but I am even more unhappy about our lack of commitment and our spasmodic ball watching which certainly caused our downfall in this game," said Watkiss.

The star of many a Sutherland success, ex-international Watkiss knows only too well what problems are caused by "ball watching". In fact in this game goals came from set plays with Melita scoring three of its goals following corner kicks.

Well, next week Sutherland will have to do much better should they have their sights on a top four berth. Polonia is not easy to toss, conceding only eight goals in 10 games so far. Only Manly and Croatia have conceded less.

ΦΑΙΣΘΗΚΕ Η ΠΑΡΑΙΣΤΗΘΗΚΕ Ο ΓΙΑΝΝΕΑΔΗΣ; Πολύς είναι ο συζητήσιος πόβ γίνεται γύρω από τόν άξιο τεχνικό Γιάννη Μαργαρίτη ο οποίος τελικά παραιτήθηκε από τό πόστο του σάν προπονητής της Βαλές Μελβόρνης για νά αναλάβει ο πολυέξοδος Ντάχερτν που μεριμνά νομίζουν ότι εά φέρει την άνουσή στην ομάδα.

Σέ πρώτη όψη η παραίτηση τόν Άλληνα τεχνικό φαίνεται φυσιολογική γιατί η ομάδα δέν πηγαινε, όποτε πάει καλό γιατί κί έ έφάνησαν τις παραμένει Κυριακής παρά την νίκη δέν μάς έδειξε τίποτα τό αξιολόγο.

Εντός αυτός τό ότι η Διοίκηση άπεφάσισε νά πάρει τόν Ντόχερτν και νά άφισει τόν Γιάννη Μαργαρίτη σάν... βοηθός ήταν κάτι που δέν στερωνται γιατί ο Γιαννέλος δέν είναι τυχαίος και αυτό τό απέδειξε πριν δύο χρόνια πόβ βγήκε ο καλύτερος προπονητής στην Αυστραλία.

Όλα λοιπόν έγιναν μέ στόχο τόν Γιαννέλο από την Διοίκηση της 'Ελλάς προκειμένου νά γλυτώσουν μεριμνά τό κεφάλιατους πόβ από καιρό έπορεπε νά τά έχουν παρατήσει.

Μέ τό περιττά λοιπόν έξοδα για τόν Ντόχερτν σόθηκαν αυτοί πόβ έκαναν τά λάθη και γλύτωσαν πρόσ τό παρόν "τρώγοντας" έν φυκρά τόν Γιαννέλο πόβ είχε κάνει τά πιά λίγα λάθη.

Έχασαν φαίνεται όλοι οι κορυφαίοι παρά γοντες της 'Ελλάς ότι ο Γιαννέλος τόβς ξελάσπωσε πριν δύο χρόνια και τούς έβγαλε από την τελευταία θέση φτάνοντας την 'Ελλάς έκει πόβ ίσως όποτε οι ίδιοι δέν θά τό είχαν φαντασθεί και μάλιστα χωρίς παχουλό μισθό σάν αυτόν τόν Ντόχερτν.

Η στήλη δέν είναι "Γιαννεαλής" αλλά δέν μπορεί νά καθύρει και τό βάθμιο πόβ έκαναν σάν πάντα άξιο τεχνικό οι ίδιοι οι παράγοντες της 'Ελλάς από τούς όποιους πολλοί τόν έκαναν και τόν... φίλο.
